REGION — FIJI

Fiji spreads across some 300 islands in the South Pacific, and freehold is its scarcest tenure — under a tenth of all land. Off Viti Levu's north coast, the Rakiraki shore and its offshore islands face the Bligh Water, known for reef diving and steady trade winds.

THE LOTS

One Acre of Beachfront

The subdivision is planned around the island's natural topography, keeping each section private with its own ocean access. Each parcel runs to about an acre — ample room for a sprawling main villa, guest bures and private gardens — under dramatic rain trees and mature coconut palms. Several high-end residences already stand in Lomanisue Bay, proof of concept for luxury island living here.

LAND AND WATER

Sand, Reef & Trade Winds

The pin on the map marks the lots area on Nananu-i-Ra's waist, fronting the bay's white sand and warm, calm water. The area is a world-renowned hub for windsurfing, kitesurfing and foiling on the consistent trade winds, while the Bligh Water offshore holds vibrant coral reefs and diving, and deep-water channels legendary for tuna, wahoo and mahimahi.
