A Flat Island in the Channel

Pločica lies in the middle of the Korčula Channel, between the islands of Korčula and Hvar — seven hectares of grass, rock and tamarisk, so low and level that sailors liken it to an aircraft carrier.

One building stands on it: an Austro-Hungarian lighthouse of 1887, still working, its light flashing twice every ten seconds over the channel. No village, no shop, no resident keeper.

STAY

Two Apartments, One Lighthouse

The lighthouse building holds two self-contained apartments, one on each floor, behind thick stone walls that keep the interiors cool through the summer day.

THE APARTMENTS

Apartment A6	ground floor · 3 double rooms · sleeps 6
Apartment A8	first floor · 4 double rooms · sleeps 8
The Building	165 m² over two floors
The Yard	stone-paved · fig and tamarisk shade
The Light	1887 · automated, still working

Both apartments together sleep fourteen — with Struga, the most of any lighthouse stay in Croatia. Book one, or book both and have the island to yourselves.

LIFE ON THE ISLAND

Life on the Island

THE NORTH SHORE

A shallow sandy lagoon beside the boat hoist — calm, warm water made for small children, and the island's gentle face.

THE SOUTH SHORE

A rocky seabed freedivers rate among the best in the Adriatic, visibility to twenty metres. Octopus in the rocks; line fishing at dawn and dusk.

THE EVENING

No light but the lighthouse's own. At dusk the beams of Sućuraj on Hvar and Lovišće on Pelješac answer across the water.

THE REGION · DALMATIA · CROATIA

Between Korčula and Hvar

The island sits mid-channel, with a neighbour on every horizon and none of them close: Korčula to the south, Hvar to the north, and the long arm of the Pelješac peninsula closing the view to the east.

Prigradica, the little harbour the transfer boat runs from, is some four and a half miles away on Korčula's north coast. Vela Luka and the old town of Korčula are the island's towns; Orebić faces them across the water from Pelješac.

GETTING THERE

By Boat from Prigradica

25 MIN

THE CROSSING

The lighthouse programme runs the return transfer from Prigradica, on Korčula's north coast — a fast boat across the channel, arranged when you book.

CAR FERRY

FROM SPLIT

Prigradica is reached by road from the Split to Vela Luka car ferry. Cars are left at the transfer point, where guarded parking can be arranged.

DUBROVNIK

THE AIRPORT

Dubrovnik is the nearest airport. Buy provisions before the ferry, in Split or Vela Luka — there is nothing to buy on the island.

Check-in from 14:30, check-out by 09:30 — the boat sets the rhythm of the island.

THE ISLAND WAY

Running on Sun and Cistern

THE POWER

Solar modules feed a standard 220-volt supply through the building — lights, chargers and the ordinary comforts of a self-catering stay.

THE WATER

The island drinks from its own cistern. Guests are asked to draw it carefully — and many bring drinking water for the table as well.

THE LIGHT

The light is automated and remotely monitored, and the keepers were withdrawn long ago. The island's only residents now are its guests.

THE SHORT VERSION

A lighthouse built to be self-sufficient in 1887 — and self-sufficient still.

WHO ELSE IS THERE — 19 · 13 / 20

Book both apartments and nobody else is here — no keeper, no staff, no second household. One apartment alone means at most one other group in the same building.

WHO CAN GET IN — 17 · 15 / 20

Boat-only, offshore in the channel, with no public route onto the island; every arrival is the programme's arranged transfer. The shores are open, as island shores are.

SPACE TO DISAPPEAR — 16 · 12 / 20

Seven hectares of plateau, two shores and a lagoon for one group — or shared between two, when the building and its yard are the common ground.

OUT OF SIGHT, SOUND & TRAFFIC — 16 · 14 / 20

No roads, no cars and no light but the light. Fishing boats work the channel; the neighbours are silhouettes, answering at dusk with their own beams.

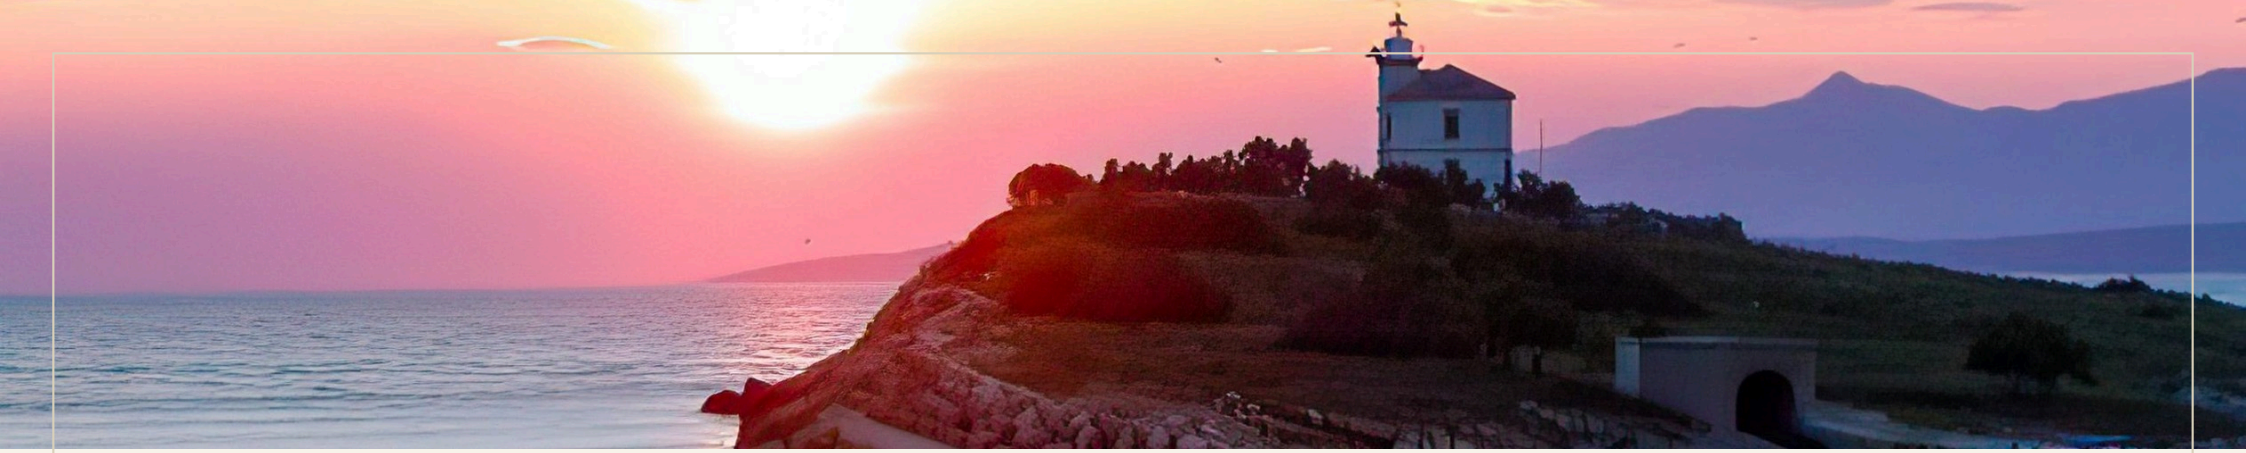

INVISIBLE SERVICE — 16 · 14 / 20

No staff on the island in either mode. The captain lands you, supply and seafood runs are a call away — and then the island is left to you.

Gold fill — Whole Island: both apartments, the island to yourselves.
White dashed — Apartment Stay: one apartment, one other group at most.
